01 / SEVERAL DAYS BEFORE

Lock the anchors

☐ Confirm where you are sleeping and how far it is from the boardwalk.

Compare the walk, parking plan, and return trip before choosing on price alone.

☐ Choose one anchor activity for the group.

One agreed priority protects the day from becoming a sequence of negotiations.

☐ Check the official event calendar.

Events can change traffic, parking, hours, and crowd pressure.

02 / NIGHT BEFORE

Pack for the actual day

☐ Check the National Weather Service forecast.

Pack for the observed forecast, not a generic beach-day assumption.

☐ Pack water, sun protection, a light layer, and a small rain option.

Add medication, chargers, and a dry pouch if your group needs them.

☐ Make room for one photograph worth keeping.

Clean the lens, free storage, and ask one person to get the organizer into the frame.

Remove arrival friction

☐ Choose a parking or Park-and-Ride option before driving.

Use the Town of Ocean City source for current locations, rules, and rates.

☐ Name one meeting point and one return time.

Use a visible landmark that works even if the group loses signal.

☐ Choose a 45-minute, 60-minute, or full-boardwalk route.

Match the route to the slowest walker, then decide where the group can extend.

Keep the day moving

☐ Check beach and rip-current guidance before entering the water.

The boardwalk plan and the ocean plan are different safety decisions.

Keep faces visible and include the boardwalk, ocean, pier, or a recognizable storefront.

☐ Take one deliberate water and shade break.

A short reset is cheaper than losing the last third of the day to fatigue.

Close the loop

☐ Run a bench, beach, stroller, and charger check.

Give one person responsibility for the final sweep.

☐ Send the best photo to everyone in the group.

Do it while names, jokes, and small details from the day are still fresh.

☐ Choose whether the trip needs a finished keepsake.

Keep the original private and use a human-reviewed workflow if you transform it.
